

Contributors

MICHAEL J. CONNOLLY, S.J. teaches political science at Gonzaga University, Spokane, Washington. He holds a Ph.D. from Monash University. His thesis on Church Lands and Peasant Unrest has been accepted for publication by the Ateneo de Manila University Press.

DOREEN G. FERNANDEZ is professor in the English Department and chairman of the Department of Communications, Ateneo de Manila University. She has authored numerous articles and works on Philippine literature and culture.

VIOLETA LOPEZ-GONZAGA is research director of the La Salle Bacolod Social Research Center, and the Handumanan Science Foundation. Among her works are The Mangyans of Mindoro and Peasants in the Hills, A Study of Social Change Among the Buhid Swidden Cultivators in the Philippines.

ANDREW GONZALEZ, F.S.C., president of De La Salle University, has done research and written widely on language and language education in the Philippines. He has his Ph.D. in Linguistics from the University of California at Berkeley.

VITALIANO R. GOROSPE, S.J. is professor of ethics and moral theology, Ateneo de Manila University. He has written and lectured on Philippine national issues and Filipino values, and on moral and social questions.

GERALD SUSSMAN, an assistant professor at Emerson College in Boston, teaches international politics, communication economics and political economy and has spent many years in the Philippines.

MOTOE TERAMI-WADA has written numerous articles on Philippine Japanese relations. She obtained her M.A. in Asian Studies at the University of the Philippines. She is currently pursuing her Ph.D. in History at U.P.