

Contributors

CELESTINA P. BONCAN'S note is part of her masteral thesis on "Philippine Dependence on the Mexican Monetary System, 1571-1861." She was an archivist in U.P.-Benguet History Project, and also a researcher and translator at the Lopez Memorial Museum.

SHINZO HAYASE did his undergraduate work in Asian History at the University of Tokyo. He received his Ph.D. in History from Murdoch University and wrote his thesis on Maguindanao in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

FLORENTINO H. HORNEDO is associate editor of this review and associate professor in the Department of Pilipino, Ateneo de Manila. He obtained his Ph.D. in Literature and pursued doctoral studies in History and Political Science at UST.

RUURDJE LAARHOVEN finished her M.A. in Anthropology from the Ateneo de Manila. She did research in the Netherlands, Australia, Hawaii, U.S.A. and is presently teaching at the Ateneo de Manila.

FRANCIS C. MADIGAN, S.J., who first came to the Philippines in 1941, has been a faculty member in sociology at Xavier University since 1957. He is currently professor of sociology and director of the Research Institute for Mindanao Culture.

NARCISO G. REYES' thirty odd years in the foreign service were spent in Asia, with assignments in Bangkok, Rangoon, Peking and Jakarta. He has served in the secretariats of both SEATO and ASEAN. Before his career in the foreign service, Ambassador Reyes wrote essays, poems, and short stories, including the prize-winning "Lupang Tinubuan."

MICHAEL W. ROSCHLAU is a research scholar in the Department of Human Geography, The Australian National University. He received his M.A. in Transportation Geography from the University of British Columbia.

ISAAS S. SEALZA is author of several sociological journal articles on upland agriculture in the Philippines. He is an instructor in sociology at Xavier University and a junior research associate of the Research Institute for Mindanao Culture.

ELIZABETH PINO WITTERMANS finished her M.A. at the London School of Economics and her Ph.D. at the University of Leiden in Anthropology. She worked with her husband on the first Indonesian-English dictionary "Kamus Inggeris" volume 1.